

MARIO UMANA

Mr. Umana is a lawyer specializing in international economic law, including trade and competition law. He has graduate degrees (LL.M and SJD) from Georgetown University Law Center, in Washington, D.C. Before joining the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), he worked at INCAE Business School in Central America in the development of a Regional Competitiveness Agenda under the leadership of Professors Michael Porter and Jeffrey Sachs. He also served as a Manager of the Ministry of Agriculture and Livestock of Costa Rica and teaches as an adjunct professor of Georgetown University Law Center. Mr. Umana currently works as an International Trade and Integration Sector Specialist for the IDB in Washington D.C., with main responsibilities for supervising projects in the Caribbean countries.