

SUSAN JOEKES

Susan Joekes is an Economist specialising in international economic relations, competition and regulation, and labour markets with a special interest in gender analysis. She has degrees from the Universities of Edinburgh and Oxford in the UK. Before joining IDRC in 2000, she was based at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, England. She has been on the staff of UNCTAD in Geneva and the International Center for Research on Women in Washington, D.C. and has undertaken consultancies for several multilateral and bilateral development agencies including the UN, ILO, World Bank, Commonwealth Secretariat, UNRISD and DFID. She has carried out field research in many countries including Morocco, Tunisia, Egypt, Uganda, Benin, Pakistan, Malaysia, Mexico and the Dominican Republic, and has published widely on issues of gender, trade, competition, adaptation to environmental change and development. She is currently a Senior Program Specialist in the Middle East and North African Regional Office of the IDRC attached to the Globalization, Growth and Poverty program initiative.